

Sustainable Development at the BOA Group

Sustainable development for the BOA Group means to reconcile social, economic and ecological aspects with the company mission.

The aim of social sustainability is to form a viable society for the future, in whose development all members of the community take part. The most important aspects are the compliance and protection of human rights.

The economic sustainability demands that efficient behavior should offer an everlasting basis for acquisition and prosperity. Thereby, the protection of economic resources from exploitation is of particular importance: Companies, which dedicated to sustainable development, committed themselves to override forced and child labor as well as discrimination in the workplace.

The third aspect, ecological sustainability, strengthens the environmental and climate protection. Companies should contribute to the preservation of biodiversity and generally interact gently with the natural environment. This includes the development and distribution of new, environmentally friendly technologies.

Sustainable development of the BOA Group is not regional limited, but should be achieved globally, including all subsidiaries and shareholdings worldwide.

The principles of sustainable development are already implemented in several application fields of the BOA Group:

- We support our automotive customers in implementing the new emission standards for the continuous reduction of emissions.
- With its products the BOA Group supports the implementation of renewable energies. Its products are applied in solar power plants, desalination plants, water treatment plants, biogas plants, block heating stations, etc.
- The companies of the BOA Group are ISO 14001 certified or follow these standards. The declared goal hereby is the continuous improvement of environmental performance and in this regard the avoidance of environmental pollution in all development, production and service processes with the application of the intra-company environmental standards.

The BOA Group has committed itself to follow the principles of sustainable development also for the future and is continuously anxious to represent and implement them.